

Don't Turn Off The Football Game

It's football season. School is back in session, the days are getting shorter, and the weather is starting to turn.

If you sit down to watch your alma mater play, your "to-do" list may grow. Your car may only have one more snowy season. Your child may be discussing a different college than you were preparing for. And your spouse may be dropping more hints about that "winter getaway" you mentioned.

If any of those sound familiar, give me a call. Not during halftime, but when you've had a minute to frame things up in your mind.

Your financial strategy may help you pursue your goals. But occasionally, those goals shift, and we may need to call an "audible" to get the best play. It happens all the time on the football field, so expect it to happen once in a while with your finances.

Enjoy the season. And let me know how your team is doing!
